DATA-DRIVEN

Where are COMBAT resources needed most?

COMBAT's mission expanded in 2014 to include not just funding drug prevention and treatment programs, as well as law enforcement efforts to fight drug-related crime, but to also addressing all violent crime in Jackson County. Pin-pointing those areas in the county with the highest instances of violence is crucial. COMBAT must be data-driven.

Therefore, COMBAT has been working with the county's IT Department to develop a crime mapping system that we hope to soon make available to the public. Inputting statistics provided by local police departments has generated a map indicating 19 areas of interest throughout the county.

RESULTS-ORIENTED

The focus in generating the maps included in this document, which show each of these 19 areas, has been on Part 1 Violent Crimes: homicides, sex offenses, aggravated assaults and robberies. The software is being developed to automatically identify "hot spots" based on reports of these crimes in relationship to the population of the area. While some areas may have significantly fewer overall violent crime reports compared to others, the rate (number of instances reported vs. populations) determines whether or not the system designates a neighborhood an area of interest.

This data will, likewise, be used to mark our progress as we move forward and answer the essential question in addressing violence in Jackson County: Are we getting results?
